Disability Discrimination Law 25 Years Old

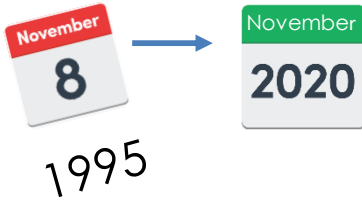

- Since November 1995 the law, the Disability Discrimination Act and later the Equality Act, has said ...

- It is against the law for a person with a disability to be unable to use the same services as everyone else ...
- Just because they have a disability

Spreading the News

- Since November 1995 lots of good things have happened
- Here are 2 examples of how some things have become more accessible:

Access to College

Bank

Access to Services

- But as people with learning disabilities and autism ...
- We know there are still Barriers stopping our access, opportunities and inclusion to many things

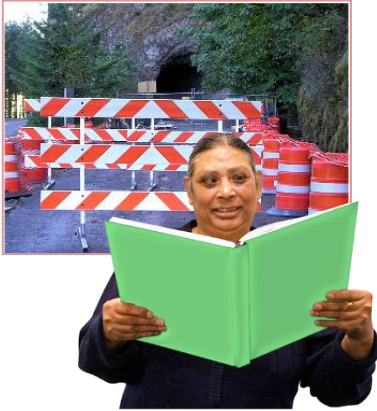

Spreading the News

- So what are the Barriers?
- And what will it take to remove them?

Spreading the News
